POETRY.

Its words
Are few, but deep and solemn, and they break Fresh from the fount of feeling.—Percival.

LIFE'S WASTED HOURS.

Oh, give me back, the sunny hours, Replete with youth's exulting health;
When life was one bright path of flowers—
A mine of joy's seducing wealth;
And sweet I heard the passion's sing As mild and gay as bird on wing.

Oh, then the bloom of early youth, By sorrow's hand had ne'er been brushed;
Nor bold heart learned to hide the truth,
That with its warm impulses gushed Like mountain stream that pours along With limpid current bright and strong.

Ye, wasted hours! I trace thee now, Upon my bowed and sinking form;
And on my deeply furrowed brow,
That shows the wreck of passion's storm;
Whose lightning's o'er my heart yet play,
And sternly claim their hateful sway.

How oft the saddening thought of thee, Soon mars my wildest time of mirth!
And with thy goading loss I flee, And dash the sweetest cup to earth That e'er was filled amid banquet high,
To thrill the heart and light the eye.

Life's wasted hours! the waste of mind—
The loss of many a pearl of thought, With thy remembrance is entwined:
And now my soul with grief o'er-trait, Mourns vainly for thy vanished light, Forever silent and so dim.

The drooping form may health require,
The cheek its rosy mantling bloom, Bright joy usurp the keener pain,
And peace o'er strife its reign resume;
But like untended frost-nipt flower—They ne'er return—life's wasted hours.

ON A LADY.

DAQUERRETYPE BY PLUMBE.
How perfect the resemblance!
The picture breathes and speaks—There's mirth within her merry eyes, And dimples on her cheeks.
I am most tremble at a gaze, Lest it should glide and pass From the surface of the metal, Like a shadow from a glass.

Oh, I would labor many an hour, And journey many a mile,
To catch the tender sweetness
Of that delicious smile!
There never was a lovelier From lips of woman won, And truly could be copied by No artist save the Sun.

CORRESPONDENCE.

How glorious is this invention of writing, when by we can easily communicate to our absent friend whatever may afford them pleasure or improvement!

TROY, NEW YORK.

July 8th, 1846.

This is one of the most delightful towns, I ever visited. It is as small compared with New York, as its fountain in Cannon place is when compared with the one in the Park on Broadway. Coming as we did, I deeply from New York to Troy, you may know how natural it was for us to be struck with the comparative quiet of the latter; but after being here a day or two, we begin to regard this as a very active city. It contains, perhaps, nearly as many inhabitants as Washington, but is not a place of such magnificent distances; the streets, however, are sufficiently wide, and the whole appearance of the city interesting. The business is considerable, both in a commercial and manufacturing point of view. It is advantageously situated on the east bank of the beautiful Hudson, and has excellent facilities by land and water for its intercourse with the cities of the East and West. Its canal and railroads branch out in almost every direction, and there are daily arrivals and departures from and to all parts of the country. At this season, numbers of persons are here, on their way to the Springs, in search of health and pleasure. There are about 20 churches, and as many hotels, and the number of manufacturing establishments is considerable: from which it appears that the folks here work, and therefore deserve to eat, and that they also delight to pray. The truth is, I am exceedingly pleased with Troy, in many respects, and believe its people to be a worthy, industrious, and pious community.

The Temperance cause is evidently on the advance here. Our excellent host, Mr. Hiram Green, proprietor of the Troy Temperance House, (which I take great pleasure in recommending to the patronage of the travelling portion of the people) give us considerable information on this subject. It is unnecessary, however, for me to enter into detail, as you will receive in exchange for your paper the new Temperance journal just started here by a very respected and efficient advocate of the cause, and from its columns you will be able to cull for your readers what ever is of interest to them in relation to the state of the work in this flourishing city —the county seat of Rensselaer.

The distance from this place to the Satoga Springs is only 31 miles, but I was not able to accompany my friend (the young minister) and his lady in their visit to them to-day. However, they were kind enough to bring myself and lady a bottle of the water, which we drank, not so much because its taste was pleasant, as for the mere sake of saying we had drank it. It is composed mostly of chloride of sodium, bicarbonate of magnesia, and carbonate of lime, and is said to possess fine medicinal qualities. Our friend and lady brought intelligence that a great number of visitors were now at the springs, enjoying themselves finely.

And now for the present our end is gained. We have spent the time we allowed ourselves away from home most delightfully indeed, and accomplished all that we intended, except the trip to Boston. And we should certainly go there, too, but for the conviction that it would be vain for us to attempt to see all that we desire to see in and around the great Yankee city, in the few days we should have to stay. We have therefore concluded that it is best to give up this part of our joint postponed, indulging the hope of a special visit to New England at some future period.

In the morning we shall leave this pleasant city on our journey towards home, a place more delightful, after a while, than any other, assured that we shall enjoy ourselves more at home from having been awhile absent from it. Should any thing of importance occur on our way you will hear from me again; otherwise this will be the last letter during the present trip of our affectionate son, ITINERANT.
